This week we celebrate the anniversary of the consecration of our current synagogue building here on 70th street. The building was consecrated on Lag LaOmer, May 19, 1897. One year earlier, on May 20th, 1896, an address was delivered at the laying of the corner stone by the elderly Sabato Morais, minister of our sister synagogue, Mikveh Israel, in Philadelphia. Below are excerpts of that address, it is my hope that they ring as true today as they did back in 1896.

Suffer me to deliver a plain talk. To me, it is quite indifferent whether the first rallying point of the oldest congregation in North America was Beaver Street or Mill Street, or any other spot in the city. ... What I have felt very eager to ascertain is, whether the congregation most venerable for its age deserves veneration for having maintained an honorable position amidst the largest community of Hebrews in the New World. ... I can say that this Sherith Israel has held aloft with beaming dignity the banner of the Jew. Most notably so, to my satisfaction, it has held up the standard of a genuine worship - a worship for the people by the people, that holy standard which the exiles of Spain and Portugal carried along from the Iberian peninsula and planted wherever they sought a domicile.

In my judgment, the firmness which the New York Sherith Israel has evinced in preserving that inherited heirloom unscathed, sheds thereupon lasting credit. By reason of it, I am emboldened to venture the opinion that Jeremiah would not point to that body, as backsliders; that Huldah might cite the demeanor of the congregation for having resisted influences of doubtful advantage, and that Zephaniah might feel disposed to alter his dictum and write: "This remnant of Israel do not stray away from the ancestral path, nor act disloyally towards the prescribed injunctions of the days of yore."

Understand me clearly, my brethren in faith and in synagogue worship, not simply because I was born and reared in the Sephardic school, have I spoken in this strain. There has been a period, during my unusually protracted service in the house of Israel, when I strenuously advocated a uniform Jewish liturgy. All in all Hebraic communities, through the length and breadth of this land, I earnestly desired to put an end to divisions of denominationalism. In a series of articles, I outlined a plan which all loyal to the Torah and to the Sages might have adopted. ... [But this plan failed and radical reforms spread, and...] I vow in the heart of hearts never more ... I will barter away the formulation of prayers... for songs foreign to the synagogue. May my right hand forget her cunning if I offend Gabril, Judah Ha-Levi, the Aban Ezras, all that galaxy of Hebrew genius in our horizon during the medieval ages.

I cherish the conviction that you, members of the Sherith Israel, share my resolve. The prominence of the locality in which you lay today the foundation stone of a future synagogue, will not lure you into seductive schemes. You will prefer what recalls a splendid origin, a pious ancestry, to the fascination of dazzling innovations - the offspring of an all-conquering passion to imitate and attract Gentility.
