DEBAR TOREI: THE TWELVE SIGNS, PROPHECY, AND BLESSING COMBINED
—HAZAN RABBI ISAAC ROHDE—

In Parashat Vayehvi, Jacob seems to combine into one the giving of blessings and the telling of future portents, the two functions of priest and prophet, respectively. In 48:15, Jacob says, “I take these Menasheh and Ephraim unto me that I may bless them,” and in 48:15 and 20 he is clearly giving a blessing. And yet in v. 21, Jacob seems to be witnessing something towards prophecy, and it’s not quite clear whether Jacob is blessing the people that God should return them to the land of their fathers or whether he is predicting that God will return them to the land of their fathers. By 49:1, Jacob is clearly prophesying. “And Jacob called to his children, saying, Gather yourselves and I shall tell you that which shall happen to you after my end.” And yet the prophecy for all of the tribes ends clearly in a blessing for Joseph in v. 26, and the end of this whole prophecy seems to refer retroactively to all of the preceding as a blessing, giving this curious explanation in 49:28: “All these (pertain to) the twelve tribes of Israel, and this is what their father spoke to them and blessed them, each man according to his blessing did he bless them.”

Rashi (49:28) asks the obvious question: “But aren’t there among them whom he didn’t bless but rather vexed [with a chilling or curse]?!” The answer would seem to be that prophecy and blessing, as well as cursing, are interwoven functions and not fully distinguishable. As we see most famously in the story of more Be’or. The curious wording Menasheh and Ephraim are blessed also seems to have to do with Jacob giving a “blessing” which is a true and appropriate prophecy of their future destiny. On his deathbed Jacob is both the patriarch dispensing the blessings of his heritage as well as the blind seer whose eyes bear weighty portents. And if we look carefully, back at Abraham and Isaac, as well as back to all the prophets thereafter, we see these functions combined and working in tandem.

What can we make of this combination of blessing and prophecy into one? And indeed, what are to make of the individual expressions, likening the tribes to animals, often seeming to curse them or predict a bad end! The key seems to be in this final expression “each man according to his blessing.” In the past, in comments on Parashat Vayahgi, I gave a sympathetic Jewish hearing to Joseph the Astrologer’s reading of his family constellation. Here I’d also borrow from astrology to explain that there are several different personality types. These personalities define individuals, but they may define more collective entities as tribes and peoples well. These “personality types” and their signs often hold the key to the tribes reaching their fullest blessing and happiness. Astrologers traditionally allow for many different types of personalities, with different characteristics and a multitude of different healthy and sick trajectories for each.

We as Jews must be careful not to take an excessively deterministic approach to astrology, but the basic understanding that personality type usually is destiny can be understood. It is notable that the twelve tribes correspond, like the astrological types, to the twelve months of the year and the twelve signs of the zodiac. The animals used may not be the same ones used in other cultures, the typology of the personality may not match up with other astrological systems, but the gist of it may be the same as in other astrological systems. The twelve tribes subdivide into clans, many with their own personalities, without necessarily an astrological reference, but the subdivision by genealogy may compare to subdivision by further astrological signs. Often note that today’s synagogues use symbols of the twelve tribes as a reaction in place of the twelve signs of the zodiac, which often adorned older Jewish religious structures, but that in fact they may amount to the same thing. In encompassing twelve (thirteen) tribes, like the Greek alliances, there is an encompassing of a universe of personality types and characters, each with his own flagship character, the development of which leads to its function in blessing or the frustration of which leads to failure, vexation, and curse. In the universe of personality and character, vice, virtue, blessing, and curse, as well as the successes and failures which character and its type prophetically portend, are indeed combined.

This film tells the story of Gertrude Bell, who left the confines of England to seek freedom and independence in the Arabian desert and became the most powerful woman of her day in the British Empire. The film explores the choices that trailblazing women make, and how decisions made by Bell continue to influence current events in the Middle East and the world today.

The Last Jews of Baghdad

Marking the anniversary of the Baghdad Hangings

With opening remarks from producer Carole Basri

Today, only 5 Jews remain in Iraq from a population of 160,000. This film asks, “Why did the Iraqi Jews leave?” The answer is found in the discriminatory laws and policies enacted by Iraq’s government and leaders against these former members of Iraqi society who still consider themselves “Iraqi Jews.”

Register for both films at shearithisrael.org/baghdad-screenings.

Winter Coat Drive

Now Through December 31

PTTS Shabbaton 2.0

Shabbat, January 19

After the success of our first PTTS Shabbaton, we’re happy to announce our second Shabbat morning where PTTS students are invited to take the lead in our Junior Congregation. And feel free to stick around by signing up for our Shabbat Shira Sing-Along Luncheon!

Calling CSI Teens

Like last time, we are looking for a few experienced Junior Congregation participants to mentor some of our PTTS students to help them prepare for this special event. This is a rewarding and fun chance to support our PTTS students, and can also be used to fulfill community service hours.
