The Art of the Jewish Family
An interactive crafting workshop with Professor Laura Leibman
Tuesday, March 24 | 7:00 pm
For adults & children over 10 years old

In the 19th Century, before Facebook or Instagram, commonplace books were a place to record memorable quotes, images, and ideas. By writing in each other’s collections, women built friendships and shared the emotional peaks and valleys that made up their world.

In this very special and innovative event, each participant will be given the identity of one early American Jewish woman (many of whom were members of Shearith Israel) and then make and decorate their own commonplace book, with copies of historical artifacts such as poems, stories, sketches, recipes, portraits, and newspaper clippings.

Space is limited to 24 people; registration required at shearithisrael.org/leibman-workshop.

GERSHOM, ELIEZER, & THE LEGACY OF MOSES
—Z. Edinger, Shamash—

The Torah tells us that Moses was the greatest prophet ever to have lived, he alone spoke with God face to face. We are not, however, that Moses was a particularly great parent. In fact, what little we are told of in the Torah points to Moses being absent and perhaps neglectful as a parent.

In the beginning of Parshat Shemos, Moses married Zipporah, the daughter of Jethro (Reuel) of Midian. Moses and Zipporah had two sons, Gershon, who was named at Exodus 2:22, and Eliezer, whose name we first learn of in this week’s parasha (18:6). After encountering God at the burning bush, and being given a mission to lead the descendants of Egypt, “Moses took his wife and sons, renamed them on a donkey, and returned to the land of Egypt” (18:20). Along the way, Zipporah saves Moses from mortal danger by circumcising their son. (Something that Moses neglected to perform himself.)

We do not hear about Zipporah, Gershon, or Eliezer again until this week’s parasha. They are completely absent during the entire story of the Exodus. Only at the beginning of this week’s parasha do we read that “Jethro, Moses’ father-in-law, took Zipporah, Moses’ wife, after she had been sent home, and her two sons (Gershon and Eliezer). Jethro, Moses’ father-in-law, brought Moses’ sons and wife to him in the wilderness, where he was encamped at the foot of Mount Sinai” (18:2). The Torah does not tell us when or why Moses sent his family back to Midian. Rabbi Shlomo Ben Aderet explains: “When Aaron met Moses and his family returning from Midian he said: ‘Who are these? Moses replied: ‘This is my wife and these are my sons. He said to him: ‘And where are you taking them?’ He replied: ‘To Egypt.’ He said: ‘We are already in peace in our cities and now you want to add more to our number!’ So Moses said to Zipporah: ‘Go to your father’s house. She took her two sons and returned.’” Thus according to the Midrash, Moses sent Zipporah and his sons home in order to spare them the pain of exile in Egypt.

When Jethro finally reunites his daughter and grandchildren with Moses there is no reunion between husband and wife, nor of sons with their father. Rather, it is only Moses and Jethro who embrace and then they immediately seclude themselves in a tent to catch up (18:7). Moses does not have time to spend with his family as he is at work all day (18:13). The Midrash also indicates that Moses was frequently separated from Zipporah on account of his being a prophet (See Rashbi and related midrashim in Numbers 12).

Most consistently, Gershon and Eliezer are absent from Numbers 3:1-4 where the descendants of Moses and Aaron are introduced but only Aaron’s line is actually named. In this same section we are told that Aaron’s sons succeeded him in the Priesthood. But unlike Aaron, Moses’ children do not succeed him (Numbers 27:10). The midrash there imagines that Moses appealed to God to appoint his son to succeed him, but God finds them unworthy of leadership: "ןָּרְאָה הַנַּגֵּדַשׁ וּמִלְכָּא הָעָם. "Your son’s sat still and did not involve themselves in [Thou]" What becomes of the line of Moses? Eliezer is mentioned in Chronicles, where we read: “The sons of Eliasar: Reuhashah the chief, Eliezer had no other sons, but the sons of Reuhashah were very numerous” (1 Chronicles 2:15-17).

We learn in the book of Judges that Gershon had a son named Jaronah (also identified as Shabad in Chronicles), who became a priest for the tribe of Dan. In chapter 18 we read rather ignorominously that: “The Danites set up the idol for themselves, and Jaronah son of Gershon son of Moses, and his descendants, served as priests in the Danite tribe until the land went into exile. They maintained the idol Mizah had made throughout the time that the House of God stood at Shiloh” (Judges 18:30-31).

Moses may have been the greatest of Prophets, but his family life appears to have suffered for it. Perhaps this is a lesson we can learn from. No matter how prominent or busy we become in our professional lives, it is important to spend time with our children and family.
